BACHELORS PROGRAMME IN INFANT AND EARLY CHILDHOOD EDUCATION

The aim of this study programme is to train educational professionals who will be able to apply appropriate developmental and educational methods in the care and development of infants and children in need of care from birth up to three (or a maximum of five) years of age. In possessing a complex range of care, pedagogical, psychological, and health competencies, graduates will enhance the healthy development of bodily, emotional, relational, speech, and intellectual skills within the given age group. The taught socialisation of these skills lends added support to the educational efforts of families raising small children. Graduates will be able to carry out care-related, educational, intermediary, representational and counselling tasks as well.”

Judit Neszt, PhD
Assistant Professor, Head of Programme